The class is appropriate for students who have some dance training, or have some experience with dance classes in the Dance Program. The class will be a physical introduction to the principles of modern/contemporary dance as an art-craft and a body practice. Goals for this course include development of movement skills, increased strength, flexibility and control, rhythmic awareness and creative expression. The class is designed to allow students to understand the technical requirements of modern dance so that the dancers can develop fluidity and ease with correct body usage. Students will complete take home assignments to research contemporary dance legends and will share their findings with the class throughout the semester.	0

Using The Listen Up Project (a recent local theater project about the real lives of Vermont teenagers) as a case study, students will learn about the process by which this documentary/ethnographic performance was created. Students will be taken through each stage, starting with the early interview process all the way through to the rehearsals and performance. During the second half of the course, students will have the opportunity to create their own mini version of performance - inspired by their own interests and lines of inquiry. This course will be co-taught by drama therapist, Sarah Lowry, and in partnership with Centerpoint, an adolescent mental health clinic based in Burlington.	0
